NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 2.—Sixteen persons, at least, were killed and more than two score hurt early today when the White Mountain Express of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad crashed into the rear end of the Bar Harbor Express near Wallingford, Conn. Eight bodies were taken from the wreckage within two hours after the crash occurred.

The Bar Harbor Express is a solid Pullman train of 11 coaches. The two rear coaches were smashed to bits. The third car from the rear was split in two and the fourth car turned up on end.

The dead were all in the last two cars of the Bar Harbor train. All of the passengers in these cars were either killed or seriously injured. None escaped.

THE KNOWN DEAD.

W. A. HUTCHINS, broker, of New Haven, Conn.; PHILIP HUTCHINS, New Haven, Conn.; E. HUTCHINS, general sales manager of the American Nut & Bolt Company, Stratford, Conn.; WILLIAM HUTCHINS, Norfolk, Va.; ALFRED GREEN, New York; PHILIP AYLING, New York; H. F. MARTIN, New York; ROBERT YAWN, Philadelphia; HAROLD LAMAR, Philadelphia; CHARLES PLACK, Becker, N. Y.; MARY JANE, last name unknown.

UNKNOWN WOMAN, aged about 20 years, pearl necklace and gold chain ring.

The accident occurred at 6:45 o'clock between Wallingford and New Haven. Details were lacking at an early hour, but persons residing near the scene assert that the wreck was due to the dense fog that hung over everything.

Because of the fact that the last two coaches of the Bar Harbor Express were of wood, they were smashed to kindling. Articles of them were scattered over the tracks for a considerable distance, and 200 feet distance, cushions, etc., were picked up.

Residents of Wallingford rushed to the wreck as soon as the collision was heard. Most of the passengers were still buried in the debris when the first rescuers arrived, and their cries of anguish rent the air. When the crash came, passengers in the Pullman were trapped asleep in their berths.

Both the White Mountain and Bar Harbor were westward trains. Both were in motion when the White Mountain bore down on the express ahead.

Rescuers picked up some of the bodies of the dead 60 feet from the track, where they had been hurled by the force of the collision. A reporter of the New York Evening Sun, who was on the White Mountain Express, declared that when he ran ahead to the wrecked cars, the cries of suffering victims filled the air. They begged to be put out of their misery.

According to the best estimates obtainable, the White Mountain was speeding at the rate of 45 miles an hour when the accident occurred. The locomotive plowed through the wooden coaches like a snow plow until it had struck the fourth car from the end. This it up-ended, and acted as a brace, keeping it standing on end.

Engineer Albert Miller and Fireman Robertson of the White Mountain, saw the express ahead too late to bring their train to a stop. After Miller reversed his engine, he and the fireman jumped, saving their lives.

When the accident occurred, passengers on both trains were asleep in their berths. As soon as the train stopped they rushed to the exits and surrounded the wreck in their night clothing. Scattered along the track for a considerable distance, they found bodies of the dead and dying. As soon as the rescue corps could be organized, help was given the injured, and a call for assistance was sent to Wallingford. Among the passengers were a number of physicians who led the rescue parties.

In the third car of the Bar Harbor Express were 40 boys of New York, returning from Camp Gabbassee at Mammoth, N. H. All were injured and several will die.

Charles S. Miller retired as head of the New Haven last Saturday. He was succeeded by Howard Elliott, former president of the Northern Pacific.

The New Haven officials issued a statement at noon saying that as all of the passengers were lightly clad in night clothing, identification was difficult. Most of the dead were New Englanders returning from vacations.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The Interstate Commerce Commission will send inspectors to investigate the cause of the New York, New Haven & Hartford wreck at Wallingford. The statement was made at noon that probably Chief Inspector of Safety Appliances H. H. Helwig will be in charge of the investigation. He will be assisted by inspectors from New Haven and from Hartford.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WANTS U. S. TO BUILD PLANT HERE

Efforts Will Be Made to Land Government Armor Plate Mill in the Coke Region.

The Chamber of Commerce intends to make an effort to land the proposed $10,000,000 armor plate plant, which the government plans to build to manufacture its own armor plate. Speaking of the project this morning, one of the officials of the Chamber of Commerce declared that the government project is one which is well worth the efforts of the Chamber to secure for Connellsville.

While the whole plan is still in embryo, it was authoritatively stated that efforts will be made to acquire the necessary rights of the Navy and other officials at Washington with the exceptional advantages of Connellsville as a manufacturing center.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels is looking the plan to have the government own its own plant for the manufacture of armor plate. He asserts that the cost of material used by the government would be much smaller than when the plate is purchased from individual manufacturers.

The hall will be opened the latter part of next week. Sileo will try to engage a fairy skater to give an exhibition on the opening night. Another feature of the opening day will be the appearance of an orchestra which will furnish music throughout the day.

STATE CLOSES ITS CASE AGAINST MAN
TRIED FOR MURDER*Concluding Testimony of the Prosecution is Heard at Uniontown.*OSWALD SOLARY THE DEFENDANT*Shot Brother-in-Law Without Provocation, Is the Contention; Self Defense to be Asserted Man's Plea; Minor Cases Disposed of Rapidly.

Special to The Courier.
UNIONTOWN, Sept. 2.—After placing two minor witnesses on the stand this morning and after offering in evidence the fully loaded revolver identified as the property of the dead man, Fortunato Giardelli, and the revolver with one empty shell identified as the property of the defendant, Oswald Solary, the commonwealth closed its case about 20 minutes after court convened.

The taking of testimony for the commonwealth was begun about three o'clock yesterday afternoon, and after arguments had been heard for and against the admission of the dying declaration of Giardelli that he had been shot by his brother-in-law, Oswald Solary, and that the shooting was not accidental, as evidence in the case, Judge Van Swearingen admitted the declaration as evidence for the commonwealth. In the statement Giardelli told of the trouble in his brother-in-law's store at Cardale on December 25, 1912, over a debt of about seven dollars, and said that Solary suddenly rushed into another room, hastily returned with a revolver and shot him. The statement declared that Giardelli's revolver dropped from his pocket after he was shot, and that he did not have it in his hand when the trouble occurred.

The witnesses for the commonwealth were Kenneth Collier, who made the blue prints of the store where the trouble occurred, County Detective John J. Smith, Dr. J. W. Marshall, who told that the bullet had entered the left side and had taken a downward course to the vital organs, Newton Newcomer, warden of the jail at Uniontown, who told of Solary's cutting at the fall about seven o'clock on the evening of December 25, and his taking him to the hospital, and L. D. Pollock of Cardale, who told of finding the wounded man on the floor of Solary's store and of sending him to the hospital after his death. Solary gave the two revolvers.

The commonwealth contended that Solary had shot without provocation, while the defense claimed that the shooting was done in self defense. Oswald Solary was the first witness placed on the stand by the defense and he occupied the stand about two hours. The defense admitted that he had done the shooting, but that he shot in self defense. He said that when Giardelli entered the store he asked him for the $7 owed on merchandise and that he had taken a revolver and reached for his hip pocket. The witness said that he then ran into the kitchen, seized his revolver, and ran back into the store. As soon as he appeared he shot Giardelli, who pointed his revolver at him. Solary said that he fired quickly, and Giardelli dropped to the floor.

Assistant District Attorney Morrow subjected the defendant to a searching cross examination and he held in his story that he had shot Giardelli in self defense. Mrs. Solary followed her husband to the stand, and told of the relations between her husband and Fortunato Giardelli. She said that she had seen her husband shoot Giardelli and that he had fired quickly, and Giardelli dropped to the floor.

Mrs. J. M. Bailey, charged with a serious offense by John M. Weil, entered a plea of guilty. The case came from Dunbar. James C. Lowry entered a plea of guilty to a similar charge preferred by Lizzie Still, of Vandergrift. John Kline, charged with seduction by the 17 year old daughter of Michael Jager, was found guilty on another charge. The case came from Rossiter.

Antonio Fara of Star Junction, was convicted of carrying concealed weapons. Julia Stuck was found guilty of assault and battery, but was ordered to pay the costs. She was charged by Alex Zabrisky with abusing her six year old adopted daughter at Oliver No. 1.

Charles Mackey was appointed majority inspector to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of C. L. Arenberg in Luzerne township No. 3. The license of the Bill Pitts distillery was transferred from the old building to the new building just completed.

The license of the Hotel Birmingham at Hollersheim was transferred from John J. Lohring to Frank W. Hoss, who recently purchased the property.

Mary Cook was acquitted of a charge of assault and battery preferred by Mary Gisholm of Leisenring No. 1. She was ordered to pay all the costs. The prosecutor charged that the defendant had hit her with a stone and then pulled her hair.

Charles Woods of Percy, charged with a serious offense by Opal Cole, was found guilty of assault and battery. The girl stated positively that the defendant was the father of her child, although the man denied it.

Arthur Anderson, a miner, was found not guilty of breaking and entering. Continued on Page Two.

AT DAWSON FOR BIG REUNION

Survivors of the Fifty-Fifth Being Rapidly Entertained in Building
Town Down the Yough.

About 500 veterans were in attendance at the opening session of the annual reunion of the Fifty-Fifth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, at Dawson this morning. On their arrival the veterans were met at the railroad and West Penn stations and following the registration, a reception was held and an hour or more was spent in renewing acquaintances. From all indications the reunion promises to be the best ever held. The only survivors of the regiment residing at Dawson are Eli Huston, Joshua Torrance and Henry Mottison.

An unusually interesting program has been arranged for the entertainment of the veterans. This afternoon addresses will be made, and patriotic selections rendered by the school children under the direction of Mrs. Alpha French. This evening's session will be held in the Catholic Memorial Church after which W. J. Bowdell will entertain the veterans with moving pictures of Civil War incidents. Tomorrow they will be entertained by Mrs. Sarah H. Cochran at her home "Linden Hall" at St. James Park.

The town is in gala attire for the occasion and the committee and citizens of the town will make a special effort to show the honored veterans a good time. Nothing has been overlooked toward looking after their comfort. Among the out of town persons attending are John Patterson, of Connellsville, Dr. Ross Ambleridge, Pa.; D. W. Baker, Amity, all members of Company A, 54th Regiment Pennsylvania Infantry; A. S. Hadlock, Smith Dawson, Connellsville; Mrs. Mary Patterson, Vandergrift, and Mrs. J. C. Doyle, Deben, Oklahoma. Mr. and Mrs. Davis are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Huston. Mr. Davis and Mr. Huston being members of the same regiment.

CHAUTAUQUA PLANS
HINGE ON PLEDGES
FOR COMING YEAR*Present Program is a Financial Disappointment
to Guarantors.*BOHUMIR KRYL'S BAND TODAY

Big Musical Organization, Led by a Famous Conductor, Will Give Two Engagements; Ben Greets and Bergen-Mark Trio Entertain Big Crowd.

Whether Connellsville is to remain on the Chautauqua circuit for the succeeding seasons depends upon the pledges to be obtained at this evening's concert. Superintendent S. E. Blackwood made this announcement last night, coupled with the statement that the present engagement has been a financial disappointment to both the management and the local guarantors. Last night was the first performance at which those interested in the financial side of the transaction were given a chance to endorse. The big tent was filled almost overflowing. If the attendance continues large for the remainder of the engagement, it is probable that Connellsville will be a fixture on the circuit.

In this connection it might be stated that the Chautauqua program is being better as it goes along, so far as its drawing powers are concerned. There hasn't been an uninteresting performance, far different from the earlier attractions were not the kind likely to stir enthusiasm in advance. The Chautauqua opened with the announcement of grand opera. The Redpath company gave a delightful performance, far different from the program led one to expect. The Redpath orchestra was naturally a big drawing card, but it fell on Saturday night, the worst night in the week through the coke region, where a large portion of the male population has business affairs requiring attention, and the remainder of it makes the downtown section a rendezvous.

It is predicted that the remainder of the program will show far better than the number that have gone before. The Ben Greets proved a manager that brought many out of town visitors to the tent last night. The Bohumir Kryl band should also be a good drawing card, and the remaining attractions are all of a high character. The criticism is not made that a single number has failed to come up to standard. It has happened, however, that the Chautauqua was introduced to Connellsville by a program not calculated to stir advance enthusiasm.

This afternoon and tonight Bohumir Kryl and his band of 20 pieces will fill the program. Kryl is declared to be the world's greatest cornetist, and a remarkable leader and organizer. An interesting program has been arranged for both engagements. W. Bruce Ansberry resumed his morning lectures today. They are becoming well patronized.

Tomorrow afternoon former Governor Joseph W. Folk will deliver his address, "The Fight for a State." In the evening Laurant, the Mergleins, and the Mozart Concert Company will appear. The concert company will also give a prelude to Folke's talk.

The big tent was jammed last night for the Bergen-Mark Company and the Ben Greets players. A splendid concert was given by the Bergen-Mark Company. The baritone solos of Alfred Hillis designed were highly applauded, as were the violin solos of Leon Marx. Marx is a remarkable violinist, but scarcely less artistic was the piano accompaniment of Jack Kelly, the pianist of the trio, and out of the best accompanists in the country.

The Ben Greets presented "A Comedy of Errors." It was an artistic performance in every way.

LARGEST GARAGE IN COUNTY TO BE BUILT
UPON THE WEST SIDE*Dr. J. C. McClenathan and
S. J. Harry Having the Plans Drawn Now.*THREE STORY BUILDING TO GO UP

Establishment Will be Located on the Corner of Main and Second Streets and Will Include Big Salesroom; Contract Will be Let in Few Weeks.

A new garage is to be erected on the West Side, to be the largest in Fayette county. Dr. J. C. McClenathan and S. J. Harry are back of the project. The building will be erected on the vacant lot at the corner of Main and Second streets, which is owned by Dr. McClenathan.

The plans are already being prepared and when completed the contract will be awarded. It is expected the garage will be ready for occupancy around the first of the year. The building will be of brick, three stories high. The main floor will be used as a salesroom and storage room. The workshop is to be on the second floor, while on the third a paint shop will be located. Those interested in the garage proposes to operate the only paint shop in the section of the state devoted entirely to automobile decorating.

The location of the new garage will be unusually convenient. It will be on a main thoroughfare, and the lot, being on a corner, will make it possible for drivers to enter and leave the building without turning their cars. The manager of the new garage will not be selected until the building is about ready for occupancy. Already those interested in the project are negotiating for the agency of several leading types of cars.

During the past week considerable gossip has been started concerning new garages that were to be erected. It is said that several West Side men are already soliciting subscriptions for a stock company, with a view to erecting a garage on the Westmoreland property at the corner of Main and First streets. Burgess Evans' name has also been linked with a new garage proposition on the East Side, but nothing authoritative has been announced. Dr. C. W. Ellis, C. B. Franks and W. D. Shorrock are said to be interested in the proposed West Side company.

Two garages are operating in Connellsville. W. L. Work and V. J. Clark conduct the Connellsville garage at the corner of Main and First streets. The other garage is operated by the Wells-Miller Electric Company on South Pittsburg street.

LABOR DAY QUIET

Big Crowd Gathers in Uniontown for Labor Day was quietly celebrated in the coke region. A big crowd went to Uniontown for the celebration there, it being the principal attraction in the county. The factories about town closed for the day but the stores were open as usual. In the downtown district only the banks and postoffice remembered it was a holiday.

There was no general suspension in the coke region and production for the week will not be seriously curtailed. For the most part the coke workers pulled their ovens early and made a short day of it. Few of the plants suspended operations entirely on account of the holiday.

CATHOLIC WOMEN TO BE ENLISTED IN WAR AGAINST IMMODESTY

Church Also Hopes to Curb Political Ambitions of the Sex.

POPE APPROVES PROPAGANDA

Light Against Immodest Dress Is the Most Important Aim of Education, Activity in Home and Church to be Encouraged, Summa Condensed.

BY HENRY WOOD

Rome, Correspondent of United Press. September 2.—On something of the principal of "setting a thief to catch a thief," Pope Pius, in his world-wide fight against feminism, is in favor of the women themselves as his principal combatants for stamping out what he believes to be the evils of the movement.

This crusade of the Catholic church which His Holiness considers equally as important as some respects closely allied to his fight against modernism has up to the present moment been largely in the hands of men—cardinals, archbishops, bishops and priests and prelates generally. Its fallacy to attain the ends he had hoped for is the His Holiness now believes largely to this one-sided nature of the combat and it is this that has decided him to seek the aid of the women themselves hereafter, placing the future of the movement largely in their hands.

As the first step to this end His Holiness today officially approved the prospectus for a world-wide international federation of the Catholic Women's League, National federations of the United States, England and Italy of this society already exist in all of the European countries especially where the feminist movement is strongly pronounced.

While it is known that the general policy of this new international federation of women is to be decidedly reactionary from the point of view of many of the feminist leaders in all parts of the world, yet with possibly one exception it is not to be opposed to some of the more vital principles of the movement. It has been over the theory of Pope Pius X that the sphere of women should be limited absolutely to the home and the church and this restriction will be largely the basis and to be attained by the new reactionary movement.

The federation will in no way interfere with those feminist movements the aim of which is merely the highest possible development of women in fact, it will have a propaganda all of its own to that end but in the attainment of this highest development of which women are capable it will seek to keep her ever within the sphere of the home with the church as her outlet for activities of a broader nature.

The one exception, however, that is to be made, and that is to be made at once, is that of a determined and able against the modern evils of fashion. It was in fact the urgent necessity of this need largely upon the failure of the church to attain this end and by the usual exhibitions of its inability that prompted Pope Pius to the immediate approval of the plans for the international federation of the women.

some of the pronounced tendencies of feminism will be left open until the first international congress. At that time a program will be submitted which will have the approval of Pope Pius X and which he is confident will attain the ends which up to the present moment he has vainly sought through the usual channels of the church.

Within the past few years, however, the modern fashions have brought about a light from the church against much of the modern tendency which it declared is demoralizing women not only morally but economically. This fight especially in Italy, has had one or two culminating points, but culminating points that have always later ended in failure. Cardinal Perrai two years ago issued an order prohibiting the wearing of hobble skirts. Not only has the order utterly futile but resulted in the lifting off of attendance at all religious functions by women and girls.

Last year Cardinal Cayul, patriarch of Venice, and successor of Pope Pius in that position, announced, when the prevailing fashion reached that point where the décolleté of the waist and the slit of the skirt threatened to meet at the waist line, that no woman whom he considered immodestly dressed would be allowed to attend any service in which he officiated. The first women however, who he ordered removed from the church because of his dress, instituted civil proceedings against the cardinal and the movement came suddenly to an end. In the face of these failures His Holiness has now asked the new international federation to take up the fight at once, and this will be done.

The other lines along which the federation is to act in its fight against modernism are:—

Americans in Mexico Flock to Vera Cruz for Safety, Following Wilson's Advice.

Many Americans in Mexico dropped their business, closed their homes and hurried to Vera Cruz after President Wilson announced his policy of noninterference in Mexican affairs and had urged Americans there to leave the country. Every train entering Vera Cruz brought refugees, some of them indignant at the President's order, but others satisfied to leave the land of revolution. The sight of the United States battleships was good to the eyes of all.

SHOOTING OFF SOLID

Large Proportion of Illinois Coal an Mine.

Of the production of 59,855,246
short tons of coal in Illinois in 1912, 26,875,019 tons, or 44.9 per cent, were mined by machines. 7,576,305 tons, or 12.8 per cent, were pick-mined, and 25,403,922 tons, or 42.3 per cent, were shot off the solid, according to L. W.
Parker, of the United States Geological Survey. In 1911 45.6 per cent of the total Illinois production was machine-mined, and 49.3 per cent was shot off the solid. These figures show that a comparatively small proportion of Illinois coal is hand-mined and the remaining large amount is machine-mined is unobjectionable and inexpensive.

In this respect Illinois stands in unfavorable comparison with West Virginia, where less than 1 per cent of the production in 1912 was shot off the solid. The larger proportion of machine-mined tonnage in 1912 is attributed and bears out Mr. Parker's statement in the Survey report for 1912 that the Illinois operators were determined to reduce as much as possible the pernicious practice of "making the powder do the work."

The satisfactory character of the Illinois beds is favorable to machine mining, and there appears to be no good reason for permitting solid-shooting to continue. The number of mining machines in use increased from 1,402 in 1911 to 1,974 in 1912.

KANSAS HAS GOOD COAL YEAR

Produces Over $11,000,000 Worth in 1912, an Increase of $2,000,000.

The production of coal in Kansas in 1912 increased from $1,767,718, short tons, valued at $2,124,572 in 1911, to $2,956,152 tons, valued at $11,321,130, according to figures compiled by L. W.
Parker of the United States Geological Survey, in co-operation with the Geological Survey of Kansas. The gain amounted to 15 per cent in quantity, and 15.5 per cent in value.
The average price per ton advanced from $1.55 to $1.52. The increased production in Kansas, as in the other Southwestern States in 1912, may be attributed to the diminished supply of fuel oil and natural gas from the Mid-Continent field. These fuels, especially fuel oil, on account largely of the increased demand for gasoline, have been virtually removed from the steam trade and steam users have returned to coal.

In 1912 a total of 11,616 men, who worked an average of 292 days, were employed in the coal mines of Kansas, against 11,357 men for an average of 290 days in 1911.

The fatality record in Kansas exhibits the same improvement in 1912 that was evident in most of the coal mining states. The number of fatal accidents decreased from 42 to 29, a diminution of exactly one-third.

CAUSES HEAVY DAMAGE

Illinois Biennial Shutdowns of Coal Mines Result in Big Losses.

That the coal miners of Illinois are probably better organized than those of any other bituminous coal mining state is stated by Edward W. Parker, chief statistician of the United States Geological Survey. One result of this has been the establishment throughout the coal mining regions of the eight-hour day. But the habit of biennial shutdown has naturally resulted in long periods of idleness and loss of income both to operators and to employees.

The total number of men employed in 1912 was 78,094 who worked an average of 191 days. Idleness due to strikes or suspensions affected a total of 59,595 men, who lost an average of 32 days. The aggregate idle time due to labor troubles was 13 per cent of the total time made.

ANTHRACITE MINERS FOND OF HOLIDAYS; THEY ARE NUMEROUS

Mine Operators Reach Conclusion They Want Less Work.

TIEUPS ARE SOMETIMES SERIOUS

On Frequent Occasions Only Few Men
Lay Off, But They Tie Up the Collectories While They Idle. Some of the Layoff Days Always Observed.

That the anthracite mine workers of northeastern Pennsylvania are satisfied with a certain annual income and that increases in pay means less work per man, is the conclusion to which the operators have been forced by the present apathy of labor in that region. The public squares are constantly filled with workers who are taking a day off and it is considerably predicted that when this data is compiled by the Pennsylvania Department of Mines their annual average earnings for 1912 will prove not to exceed those for 1911 in spite of the 10 per cent increase granted last year.

In addition to their numerous holidays an approximate list of which is here printed for the first time, they select upon the slightest pretext for staying away from work, and spend the "buttoned" time about. The holidays, some of which affect only a part of the labor, but many of which close down every mine in the region, are as follows:

New Year's Day, Feast of the Epiphany, Greek Christmas, Greek
New Year's, Candlemas Day, Lincoln's Birthday, Ash Wednesday, Washington's Birthday, St. Patrick's Day, Annunciation Day, Anniversary of the Eight-Hour Day, Holy Thursday, the day preceding Good Friday, Good Friday, Holy Saturday, Easter Monday, Old Folks' Day, Ascension Day,
White Monday, Memorial Day, Corpus Christi Day, St. Peter and St. Paul Day, Independence Day, Feast of the Assumption, Labor Day, Feast of the Nativity, Columbus Day, Mitchell Day,
All Saints Day, All Souls Day, Election Day, Thanksgiving Day, Feast of the Immaculate Conception and Christmas.

Only two of the foregoing holidays fall on Sunday, so that, except 50 Sundays in addition to the 12 holidays to be subtracted from the 365 days of the year. In 1911 which holds the high record for anthracite output and working days the mines worked 284 calendar days. This means that the miners were idle 17 days on account of sickness, accident, or machinery in the breakers, or disqualification on the part of the miners to work, and 84 days on account of Sundays and holidays. In 1910 the number of colliery days was 312, the number of holidays and Sundays 84, and the remainder was 69 days.

GINK AND DINK—A Sunset Effect is Easy to Acquire, But Hard to Get Rid Of.

BIGGEST DAM IN WORLD BUILDING

To Impound 4,000,000,000 Cubic Feet of Water.

IT WILL BE 350 FEET HIGH

Giant Structure Thrown Across the Yuba River is Expected to Double California's Water Power When Finished; Will be in Operation Jan. 1.

In a few months there will be partly completed in California a dam which, when entirely finished, will be the largest in the world. It is expected that the structure will reach a height sufficient to allow it to be put in operation about the first of the year, but later on the work will be carried through to the full extent of the magnitude contemplated. The finished project will result in more than doubling the horsepower available in the state, which on Jan. 1, 1912, the records of the agricultural department showed to be 450,000.

This enterprise is part of the hydro-electric development of the Golden State. The dam referred to is being built in a narrow gorge of the south fork of the Yuba river, commonly called the South Yuba, just below Lake Shasta, one of the largest of a chain of storage reservoirs owned and operated on the Yuba river by the largest public utility corporation of California. The capacity of this lake today is about 250,000,000 cubic feet, but the new dam, which is to be 350 feet high, will have the effect of raising the waters to such height as to give the lake a storage capacity of just sixteen times that amount.

Installing Power Plants. Six power plants are also being constructed along the entire length of the valley country between the Sierra Nevada mountains and the Sacramento valley. These plants, when installed to their full capacity, are expected to add not less than 100,000 horsepower to this country's electric generating and distributing system.

An appropriation of $10,000,000 was made for this great enterprise. Work was begun immediately upon the approval of the engineers' estimates in July, 1912, and before the winter season stopped operations the foundation of the big dam had been constructed to the extent of lifting a breast wall to the waters of the South Yuba at a height of thirty-eight feet above bed-rock. From the site of this dam the water is to be conveyed by a mile long tunnel bored through solid rock, which at the other end discharges into what is known as Bear river valley, and down which, at the distance of nine miles from the lake, stands the Drum powerhouse, another in a series of the bear river underworks a precipice of 1,375 feet, down which two pipes will convey the waters from the ditch above to the waiting wheels. Work on this tunnel was carried on through the winter, and on May 1 last the army of workmen, laboring from either end, met in the middle, and the tunnel is now fully completed.

The project had its origin in the purchase by the California Gas and Electric corporation of the properties of the South Yuba Water company, which owned a number of storage lakes, canals and ditches that were originally constructed for the benefit of the mining industry in the days before the hydroelectric industry was put out of commission by California's state law. This purchase was made in 1905, and only a few months later the company's engineers went over the ground and selected Lake Shasta as the best available site for a storage reservoir that would be larger by far than anything ever before conceived, let alone executed, in that region.

Then came the San Francisco fire and the 1907 panic, and it was not until the Pacific Gas and Electric company took over the property and franchise of the California Gas and Electric corporation that the great dam and its collateral work became practicable. The Pacific company has been serving with gas and electric power an extensive region in California, and the new project will vastly enlarge its business.

THEIR EYES BELIEVE THEM.

Seals Are Ferocious and Devour Live Fish Inch by Inch.

Seals are still numerous and are disliked by Labrador fishermen because their skill is so much greater. Dr. Grandell says that he has known a seal to hunt a net so persistently that to get any fish the owner had to watch all the while at one end of it, and even then the seal would almost snap off the fishermen's hand as he tried to be free to disentangle the salmon.

"The large, gentle eye makes the seal's appearance exceedingly attractive and those inclined to be sentimental have found in him a great scope for their effusions. As a matter of fact, he eats his prey alive. He will take a bite out of a fish and leave the rest to struggle away and die slowly. They are fierce fighters and will catch and eat birds swimming on the surface of the water.

One was seen devouring a salmon alive. The seal swallowed him by inches, swimming a mile while the struggle lasted. It seemed an open question whether he would succeed or not. Another seal was seen to capture a gull on the water, but the persistent harrying he got from the rest of the birds persuaded him to let the wounded victim go.—Chicago News.

MANAGERIAL ABILITY.

If You Think You Possess It Here is a Test You Might Try.

Any one who has to manage men or things must be able quickly to bring order out of confusion. That your friend's talent in this respect by writing on your paper five words of a special class, such as the names of five flowers or of five animals or of five famous poets, with the first letter always in the right place, while the order of the other letters is changed.

The person on whom you are experimenting knows only to which class the words belong—whether they are the names of animals or of flowers or of famous poets. See how long it takes him to write the five correct words in place of the misplaced ones.

The animal card may read, "Tetral, etalaph, dykeno, acrdip, gilliro." and the vegetable card, "Vellto, dillafat, melph, moroshima, cuttewah." Some persons will be able to read at once, "Turtle, elephant, donkey, spider, ko-rilla," and the other card, "Violat, duffold, maple, mushroom, chestnut."

Others who have no talent for rearranging the elements of a confused situation will stare at the words, unable to make any sense of them.—Hugo Munsterberg in Youth's Companion.

PIGEON'S RECORD FLIGHT.

Bird Flies a Thousand Miles in 26 Hours 30 Minutes.

One thousand miles, air line distance, between Abilene, Tex., and Fort Wayne, Ind., in 26 hours, 30 minutes and 6 seconds actual flying time was the remarkable flight of a homing pigeon belonging to O. Anderson of Fort Wayne during the latter part of July.

The record, sent to President Carr by the American Audubon Pigeon Union in Pittsburgh for verification, has just been officially announced. Forty-seven birds contested in the race from the Texas city, and the record made by Mr. Anderson's bird is a world's mark. The second bird to arrive in Fort Wayne from Abilene belonged to J. Schilling. It had been on the road 36 hours 51 minutes 47 seconds actual flying time. The speed of Mr. Anderson's bird averaged more than thirty-eight miles an hour.

Mediterranean Cruise Will End in Time for Christmas Holidays.

Oct. 25 has been set as the date for the Atlantic fleet to start on its Mediterranean tour. Plans for the trip were discussed recently by Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Rear Admiral Badger aboard the flagship Wyoming.

The fleet will return Dec. 26, so the sailors may spend the Christmas holidays at home. The ports at which it will call will be tentatively decided upon by Admiral Badger and submitted to the navy department.

Secretary Daniels also announced that the battleship Oregon, made famous by her run around Cape Horn from the Pacific to the Atlantic in the Spanish war, will come through the Panama canal next spring to lead the Atlantic fleet through to the Pacific.

UNCLE SAM'S LAST BIG LAND RAFFLE

Fort Peck Indian Reservation to be Thrown Open.

3,406 FARMS ARE AVAILABLE

Drawing Commenced September 1 and Will Continue Until the 20th For Homesteads, Which are Worth on Average $25 an Acre; Terms Easy.

Nearly 5,000 160-acre farm homes will be drawn by the "lucky ones" as the result of the throwing open of 3,406,000 acres of land upon the Fort Peck Indian reservation in northeastern Montana early in September. This is the last great land drawing Uncle Sam has to offer his people and one of the greatest in the history of the government land openings in point of fertility.

Government agricultural experts estimate that when this vast stretch of soil is tilled it will add about 25,000,000 bushels of grain annually to the production of the United States—enough to feed an entire nation.

The interior department is making extensive preparations to rush a big corps of clerks to Glasgow, Havre and Great Falls, Mont., which are to be the registration points. These land offices will be open Sept. 1, and the work of filing for this land will then begin. The people will have a chance to continue filing until Sept. 20.

Good Chance For All.

The vastness of the area opened to white settlement is expected to make this one of the most alluring land openings ever presented to the people inasmuch as their opportunity of getting something in the drawing will be much better than in any previous land opening. For instance, when the Cœur d'Alene, Flathead and Spokane land drawings were held last year 60,000 persons filed and drew for the lands in those three Indian reservations, the total area of which was about one-fourth of the area to be opened upon the Fort Peck reservation.

Government officials do not believe that more than 75,000 people will file for the Fort Peck land. Hence the chances of drawing a quarter section in the Fort Peck reservation "lottery" are about four times as good as they have been in previous government land drawings. The actual value of this land is said by government agricultural experts to average about $25 an acre. However, the government's appraisal for its opening to white settlement is only from $2.50 to $7 an acre, thus making real prizes for those who draw this land.

Method of Drawing. The drawing will take place in this way. The names of all who file for land will be placed in a big box, and the envelopes drawn out one by one and numbered, until enough envelopes are taken from the box to correspond with the number of quarter sections available—3,406. Those getting the early numbers will, of course, get first pick of the land, in random, according to the numbers drawn. The actual settlement of the land will begin May 1, 1914.

Settlement is the same as under the homestead law, except that the appraised valuation must be paid—from $2.50 to $7 an acre, at these terms, one-fifth of the total down at time of entry and the rest in five annual payments. The settler, however, has the option of taking advantage of the new three-year homestead law by paying for his land at the end of three years and thus proving up on it. That gives the man of small means a chance for his "white ally."

Half a dozen modern townships already have been located by the government at points along the main transcontinental line of the Great Northern railway which runs through the Fort Peck reservation for 100 miles.

TRIED TO BE TACTFUL.

Yet Little Glory's Scheme Didn't Work Out According to Rule.

"Children," said Mr. Thinkins, who had been suddenly moved to deliver a little sermon at breakfast, "whoever you hear anybody say anything mean or unpleasant, act as though you hadn't heard it. Think about something else and pretend you don't hear. That's what we call tact."

When Mr. Thinkins got home that afternoon from the office he observed that somebody had strewn his favorite golf clubs and all his golf balls over the front yard. Summoning his six-year-old daughter Glory, he said sternly:

"Glory, did you get all dad's golf things out and put them here where anybody could steal them?"

"Dad," replied Glory with perfect composure, "it's too bad our ice cream freezer's out of order, 'cause Mary can't make any ice cream."

"Glory, did you dig up all this turf knocking those balls around?"

"And Uncle Randolph came and took mother for a ride in his auto," continued the six-year-old. "When are you going to get an auto, dad?"

"But, Glory," said Mr. Thinkins, "I want to know about these golf clubs. Did you strew them around here? Why don't you answer?"

"Well, yes, I did," said the young person, "but I was trying to change the subject, 'cause I didn't want you to know that I heard something mean and unpleasant."—New York Post.

MUNICIPAL PAWNSHOPS.

In the Mont de Piété the Parisian Has a Model Institution.

The story of the Mont de Piété, the great pawnshop of Paris, reads like a romance. It is the survival of an old bank conducted by a religious order established to fight usury. This benevolent enterprise was given up to be started afresh under the direction of the government in 1801, when Napoleon was near the height of his glory. The profits go to the state and to charity—to the public aid department and to the hospitals of Paris. These charities benefit about $70,000 a year.

The storage facilities of the Mont de Piété are admirable. The Frenchman may pawn his feather bed. When it comes back to him it is as well as mattresses, blankets and all bed furnishings, has been thoroughly disinfected. The rate of interest on loans is small, and it encourages by all means the redemption of the goods on which money has been advanced. As the Mont de Piété advances money only on a conservative valuation—as a rule to the value of two-thirds of the article pawned—there is generally a surplus to go to the pawnier if the article is sold.

Municipal pawnshops in Berlin charge 12 per cent, in Brussels 7 per cent and in Madrid 6 per cent.

In London for small loans the pawnshop rate is from 400 to 1,000 per cent per annum.—Indianapolis News.

Ancient Coffins.

The coffins of the ancient Egyptians were made of marble and stone. The Romans used similar receptacles for their dead, and Alexander the Great is said to have been buried in a coffin of solid gold. In parts of England glass coffins have been found. The Athenian heroes were buried in coffins made of cedar, owing to the aromatic and incorruptible qualities, while the first record of wooden coffins in England dates back to the days of King Arthur. This monarch was supposed to have been buried in the hollowed trunk of a gigantic oak tree.

HOLTON OF THE NAVY

A STORY OF THE FREERING OF CUBA

By Lawrence Perry
Author of "Don Quixote," "Prince of Castile," etc.

"As Holton looked the girl sprang to the speaker's side and held out her hand. And as she stood there, the naval officer never forgot the picture of her countryman," she cried at length, "I have listened to all who have spoken, and I have observed you. I have wondered whether the fever has got into your brain, and whether you are children led hither and thither by the idle words of plotters."

Cesola sprang to the side of her and pushed her roughly aside.

"Recent this intrusion!" he shouted. "I resent the presence of this woman!"

What more he would have said may only be surmised, for the girl, her eyes blazing, turned to the audience, and, with finger quivering at the spy, she said:

"That man pushed me my countrymen. Is there no one in among me?" Her voice was quiet, almost unassuming, and she looked calmly around the circle. It was plain to see she was beloved of these men; but it was equally plain that the spell of the spy's words lay about their minds in serpent coils. She paused.

"I feel," Cesola had departed from among us. I must myself wipe out this gross insult."

So saying, and before anyone could move, her riding-whip flashed in her hand, and she struck Cesola a blinding blow across the face. From the sheer shock he went down as though hit by an ax. But he sprang to his feet on the instant, his face livid with rage, his hand upon a long hunting-knife.

In another second Holton would have been at the girl's side; but before he could move, a half-dozen revolvers flashed in the hands of Cuban officers, and the deep voice of the elderly captain broke the stillness.

"Stop, Senor Cesola. Remember who you are—and remember it well. We have listened to you, and now we will listen to the beautiful and spirited senorita."

Miss La Tossa smiled radiantly. "Thank you," she replied. "I have no burst of eloquence to give you, men of Cuba. I was merely that you have been badly advised, misled, by those whose interest it is to mislead you. And, further, I do nothing more than this."

She flashed aloft President McKinley's dispatch, and then handed it to the Cuban captain, who read it and then in silence passed it around the circle. At length, it was about to go into Cesola's hands. Miss La Tossa intercepted the paper and extended it to an officer whom she knew.

"I do not wish this to pass into that man's hands," she said. "Will you read it to him, major?"

The officer complied, and then returned the dispatch to the girl with a bow.

"Gentlemen," cried the young woman, "can you ask more than that?"

A cheer—not a general cheer—but still fairly satisfactory in its strength, greeted her words. As it died out Cesola stood forth, raising his hand. He regarded the girl malignantly.

"Let us know one thing," he snarled. "Where did you get that message?"

Miss La Tossa stamped her foot. "Silence!" she cried. "To you I shall not speak another word. If any gentleman," she emphasized the term, "if any true Cuban," this word she also emphasized—"wishes to question me, I will gladly respond."

"Well," replied an officer, "we ask you, then, to answer the statement just made by Senor Cesola."

"It is easily answered," she returned quickly. "I am not in General Shafter's confidence. He does not give to me his private messages."

"And you received this, then?" queried the officer.

"From an officer who possesses the confidence of General Shafter," not only, but of President McKinley."

"He is a Cuban officer?" suggested the questioner.

"He is an American naval officer who has been spying among us throughout this campaign and before. You know I was in Washington and in Tampa before the Americans declared war, and you know much that I saw and heard there has proved of value to us."

"I declare to you that this man Holton was sent among us to disarm us, and to prevent any effort on our part to throw off the American yoke once we saw it settling upon our necks. He was in General Shafter's camp two days before the Americans landed, and he was there in the guise of a writer for an English newspaper. If he had not designs against us, why did he not appear in his true colors? Would not Garcia have received him?"

"After the battle of Jely lat he was in Santiago. He was in this girl's house, unknown to her father, and he was awaiting this girl with carousness— which she accepted until interrupted by her father's friends—then he leaped through a window, followed by a bullet from her father's pistol."

"You lie!" The voice fairly drowned out Cesola's wild tirade; and as he recoiled from the unexpected interruption, Holton appeared from out of the darkness and stood in the firelight, pointing his finger at the spurious Cuban.

"You lie, you bound! You were the one who was in the house in this girl's house, and with you," he turned and faced the officers—"were General Toral and Admiral Corvera. You have been telling those men who I am. Well, I'll tell them who I am."

"I am an American who was set to watch you, a Spanish spy, who, in disguise of a loyal Cuban leader, has been leading your country to the edge of destruction."

"Wait, gentlemen, allow me to finish!" Holton cried, as the Cubans, pressing closer, began to mutter. "I can prove to you, and I can do it right now, that this man, Cesola, was the man who led General Castillo into that ambush at Matamoros, a month ago. I can prove to you that it was this man who conducted Garcia into a trap at Mariel last year. Only he could and he patient. I received all you should wish to know concerning him from Washington by the last dispatch-boat. His dossier is very complete. He is a spy! I will prove it."

The mercurial men in front of Holton turned from him to Cesola with frowning faces. The rapid shuffling of feet and the lowing of voices had bewildered them. They knew not what to do.

Miss La Tossa, who had stood by Holton throughout, clinging to his sleeve as though to protect him from her countrymen, now raised her head to speak when, suddenly, Cesola lifted something to his lips, and a whistle resounded above the confusion.

Silently more than one-half of those present disengaged themselves from the crowd of officers, and the next instant Holton, Miss La Tossa, and perhaps thirty of the Cubans, were surrounded by a ring of scowling men with revolvers leveled ominously.

"Not a word was spoken. Then from Cesola there came laughter."

"Men," he cried, "it was understood that a fusillade of shots here would be the signal for the attack on the Americans. In thirty seconds that fusillade will be heard, and the bullets will go where you are standing. Those who wish to engage in the attack upon the Americans will step out of that group. Join our circle, and present their revolvers as we now present them."

For a moment there was silence. Cesola took out his watch. One Cuban left Holton's side and joined the circle, two followed him, then three, then six. Finally Holton and the girl stood alone.

Cesola put his watch in his pocket and advanced to the couple. He beckoned to two men.

"Take her away from this man. He must stand alone," he said.

CHAPTER XV.

A Sweet Parting.

The girl screamed and threw her arms about Holton's neck. There was no mistaking the intentions of Cesola, and neither was there any possibility of misunderstanding the hold which the spy had gained over these men.

Holton, pale but determined, sought to disengage the girl's hands, while the men dragged gently at her arms.

At this juncture a stern voice arose above the confusion.

"Men, put up your weapons. What is this?"

General Garcia, unaccompanied by several of his staff, broke through the group of Cubans and stopped near the little knot about Holton and the girl.

"Garcia!" A cheer arose, but the general stifled it with his hand.

"Men," he said, "I have been a witness of your deliberations. I can assure you that your fusillade will be unnecessary, because it will not be needed. Your plot, I beg to assure you, has failed, Senor Cesola."

He beckoned two of his staff, who advanced and placed their hands upon the spy's shoulders. He was trembling now, and words failed his parched tongue.

The general waved his hand imperiously.

"You gentlemen will return to your commands. Every one of you. Mr. Holton, you will go back to your camp—I am glad to have been of service to you. Miss La Tossa will return to her estate—and remain there. As for you," he faced Cesola—"I shall deal with you tomorrow. Take him to my headquarters and let him be closely confined."

Several soldiers stepped forward and hastily bound the spy's arms. Miss La Tossa ran up and kissed the general on the cheek. He patted her shoulder with paternal affection.

Then, calling two of his men, he directed them to escort the girl through the secret trail to her father's estate.

This night the great hold that Garcia had upon his men not only, but upon those of Castillo and other commanders as well, was obvious. As he rode among them they arose and obeyed him, and when he spoke to them reassuringly of the Americans they listened with bowed heads and believed him.

As Holton wrapped himself in the folds of his blanket he thrilled at the thought that this fight, had it not been partially for him, partially for General Garcia, but very largely for Miss La Tossa, history might have taken a sharp turn from the long course, and chapters of the campaign in Cuba might have been written that were in no sense included in the philosophy of the wisecracks at Washington.

Thus thinking, he curled up and went to sleep with a lighter heart than in some days.

When Holton awoke Garcia had left the tent, but he soon returned, and with a smile asked his guest how he had slept. Holton thanked him, and assured him his slumber had been sound.

As they talked thus an officer appeared, and, saluting, addressed Garcia formally.

"The prisoner has no complaint to make of your decision, but asks your leniency in one respect."

"In what respect?" asked the general.

"He asks that he may be shot instead of hanged."

Garcia reflected a moment. Then he made a little gesture.

"Very well," he decided at length. The officer saluted and walked hastily away.

"Who was the prisoner?" asked Holton.

"Jose Cesola," was the reply. Hardly had he spoken when the whisper report of several rifles broke the silence of this beautiful sunlit morning. Garcia lowered his head. Holton looked vacantly into space.

And so, he thought, has passed the winter of the New Willard.

Holton's return to the American trenches was signalled by an honor that brought adequate reward, with interest, for all that he had gone through. This was a dispatch for him from the secretary of the navy, announcing his advancement to numbers for meritorious service at Tampa, and containing also information that congress had voted him the congressional medal of honor for gallantry in notifying the North Atlantic squadron of the intentions of Cervera's squadron.

An event of the next day was the return of Holton from Santiago, in company with six sailors who had been captured with him. Holton pressed forward and joined in the cheers of the regulars as this quiet-faced young man rode through their ranks on the way to Siboney after an imprisonment of more than five weeks.

He had performed a deed of signal gallantry, a deed which will live as long as the annals of the American navy live, and as the years go will grow only the brighter.

The days went on. It now seemed assured that the surrender was but a matter of short time, and Holton spent the period in enjoying a well earned rest.

At length, on July 16, General Toral and his staff rode out to San Juan to where General Shafter and General Miles and their staffs awaited him under the famous tree. The meeting was very picturesque, and dignity marked the demeanor of all concerned.

After a long discussion General Toral and his officers turned and rode toward the city, and the American generals returned to their lines. The surrender of Santiago was assured.

At headquarters Holton found that the conference of the generals had ended. General Miles was preparing to go with his men to Porto Rico, leaving Shafter, with his Fifth Army corps, to gather alone the fruits of his victory.

The men were jubilant, but many were beginning to succumb to the physical effects of their life in the wet trenches. Cuban fever was raging in every command, and men who, when Holton last saw them, were the embodiment of vigorous health and manly strength, were now lying helpless in the crowded hospital camps, their faces unmarked and yellow.

As for Holton, his health remained excellent. Natural resources had kept the fever in his blood at low ebb, and now he was confident that the last traces had been kicked out of his system.

He looked rather expectantly for orders from the admiral recalling him to the squadron, but none came, and so he settled himself down to await developments, hopeful that his recent strenuous career had ended, and that for a time at least he might anticipate days of comparative ease.

On the 17th of July, General Shafter, his staff, brigade commander, and a goodly body of troops left the trenches and, with bands playing and flags flying, marched up the trail leading into Santiago, where the surrender took place before the two armies. Then the march continued into the city.

The Spanish soldiers, some twenty-two thousand men (Holton had underestimated their number), were to be shipped to Spain, and nothing remained to be done but to assume the reins of military government and set things in order. One of the first acts of the Americans was to release political prisoners from confinement, and then as evening fell the lights were lighted, the bands played in the patio of the palace, the Venus restaurant overflowed with American officers, the streets were crowded with men, women and children.

Meanwhile what were the Cubans doing? Many of them had their homes in Santiago and naturally they were anxious to return to them, and had fully expected to do so. Now by official mandate of the Americans they were barred from the gates.

Holton knew enough of the fiery temper of those men to realize that Garcia and the other commanding officers must away great authority over their soldiers if they were to hold them in leash under such a situation as this.

It is of course, had no fears that Shafter would be unable to quell an outbreak, but at the same time if one occurred it would involve a complication not to be desired.

That the Cubans in the camps of Garcia and Castillo were openly talking of an uprising was known to everyone, and not even Garcia's assurances that he could keep them in hand quieted the fears of the more thoughtful among the officers. Yet there was no inclination to allow them to enter the city, the fear that they would turn loose upon the unarmed Spaniards still being potent.

In the absence of direct orders, Holton hardly knew what to do. His anxiety as to the outcome of the present predicament he kept to himself, not wishing to fill Washington with vague and perhaps careless alarms.

Late on the morning of the day following the surrender he mounted a horse loaned him by a cavalry officer and set out once more along the Santa Ines highway for the La Tossa estate.

Soon he reached the lodge and gate which he had entered some nights before. Up the road he cantered, and at length turned into the driveway leading to the La Tossa demesne. Two horses were tied to posts in front of the veranda, but the house itself was not thrown open to the morning air, the shutters being closed.

Something about the atmosphere of the building caused Holton to alight from his horse at a bend in the drive.

Placed Their Hands Upon the Spy's Shoulders.

Throwing the reins about the branch of a tree, he made his way through the underbrush, until looking through the foliage he could see the front of the house.

Here he waited. Why he knew not. What had come over him? Something inside was dampening the ardor with which he had set out on this important journey, and placing his spirits under a pall of utterly unreasonable foreboding. An incubus of doubt, almost of dread, settled upon him and try as he would he could not shake it off.

And yet, what nonsense! Here in the broad light of this beautiful, sunlit day to feel emotions which might be natural to a schoolgirl when alone in the dark! He could not understand it at all. But neither could he dissipate the spell.

At length, with sudden resolution, he came out of his hiding-place, mounted his horse and rode boldly up the driveway. He alighted at the door-step, followed his steed alongside the two other ponies, and mounting the steps, rang the bell, the echoes of which he could hear jangling and clattering throughout the house.

Awaiting a reply to his summons for some time, and receiving none, he pulled the bell again, now with irritable energy. Almost on the instant the door was flung open and Miss La Tossa, still in her hunting suit, and accompanied by Pierre, stood before him.

She looked at him with cold, unfeeling eyes, and Holton with a gasp stopped short.

"Why—why—" His voice failed him.

He drew himself up very stiffly.

"I beg pardon," he said. "I fear I—come here, under some sort of a misunderstanding."

A gleam of an expression crossed the girl's face, "Pierre," who remarked to her attendant, who stood rigidly at her side, "this is the gentleman we met near Sevilla, is it not?"

Pierre glanced at Holton, his face filled with an expression of savage hatred.

"It is, senorita," he replied.

"Yes, we met this gentleman at Sevilla, Pierre, and he said several things. Did he not, Pierre?"

"Yes, senorita."

"And, Pierre, what did he say?"

"He said that the Americans were to remain faithful to their promise, and that Cuba, after Santiago was captured, was to be placed in the control of the Cuban army."

"Yes," the Cuban girl had not glanced at Holton, who stood listening, rigid and angry.

"Yes, Pierre," she repeated; "and so Santiago was captured by the Americans—and the Cubans. And did the Americans keep their promise, that sacred promise?"

"No, they did not, senorita. They refused to permit the Cubans to enter the city, their own city, to attend the surrender."

"Yes, and so, Pierre, when this American officer told us our rights would be observed, he did not say what was true. Did he?"

"No, senorita. He lied."

As Holton leaped forward with an exclamation the girl raised her hand. "One moment, please. I am now going to speak to you directly. You are beneath my contempt. As a spy, I respect all that you did, save one thing. As a spy, you did your duty. You visited the Spanish lines, you tried into the affairs of our army, and you won the love and the friendship of General Garcia. All these things were your duty. But all this did not satisfy you. No. In addition, you set out to win my love."

She buried her face in her hands and a dry sob escaped her.

"You tried to win my love—" She glanced up at him with fearless eyes. "And you did win my love. You won it unceremoniously. It was yours to take. But now I know that it was all but mockery; that the love you pretended to offer was unreal, that it was but part and parcel of the game you were playing."

Holton, who had been silent, thinking it better that he should hear all before replying, could stand no more. He raised his hand.

"Sleep!" he cried with a voice of thunder. "Do you know what you are saying?"

"Yes, I do." She leaned on Pierre's arm. "Take me away, Pierre."

"One minute, Pierre." Holton's voice was low and tense. "Before you go, Miss La Tossa, I wish to tell you something. Anything I have said to you in the past I stand by. The Americans are going to relinquish this country to the Cubans—but that is a matter neither here nor there. Your manner is insulting and unfair, Miss La Tossa. I came here today with gladness in my heart."

"With deceit—with more lies!" she interrupted dramatically. "As a spy, I bow to you. You are very clever."

Holton straightened, his face white and drawn. He looked at her for a moment, searching her every feature. Something in his expression quieted her, and she pointed her hand at him.

"Listen," she said. "Last night my brother went into Santiago with a letter to you from me. He arrived at your quarters. Then he was seized and thrown out of the city for violating the order of your general that Cubans remain at a distance. Perhaps you can explain why."

"I cannot. I never received the letter."

She shook her head.

"All that is very little matter," she continued. "That letter contained what I have now said to you. And it said this besides: That the enemies of my country are my enemies, and that it is clear that no greater enemy to Cuba than the United States ever existed."

She bowed and turned away.

Holton stood for a moment watching her, and then, without a word, faced abruptly about and walked toward his horse.

"Good Luck" Amulets.

Mr. Edward Lovett, in a lecture to the members of the Folk Lore society, explained his collection of amulets for good luck used by fishermen on the coast of the British Islands. It was with no small difficulty that he secured his specimens and certified their history. Luckily here and there he met old men of the sea who had no longer any direct personal interest in the wares of Billingsgate, for it was an unwritten law among the fishermen that to communicate the nature of the charm was to destroy its efficacy for good luck. "These charms were anything but charming in themselves—old dead fish, small stones with holes in them which were suspended in the bow of the boat, an old penny found in the stomach of a dogfish which, because one fish evidently liked it would cuttle other fish as well, or a portion of a dried haddock as this bird was believed to bring good weather.—London Standard.

ELEPHANT COURTSHIP.

Feats of Strength by Which the Lady Chooses Her Mate.

When two male elephants compete for the companionship of a female they do not forget their dignity so far as to fight for the lady. They simply face each other quietly. Then one of them pulls down a branch from a tree with his trunk and lays it at his feet.

The other takes a larger branch or pulls up a big shrub by the roots and also lays it at his feet.

Number one then reaches a still bigger branch, and this strange competition goes on, turn and turn about, until at last the contestants try to pull down trees wholesale, and the one who fails to uproot his tree in turn is abandoned by the lady elephant, who has been an interested spectator of the strange duel. She goes off with the possessor of the largest tree, and the vanquished elephant retires sullenly.

This trial of strength species of courtship is very remarkable when contrasted with the ordeal of battle of most other animals and shows the highly developed intelligence of these enormous creatures.—Wide World Magazine.

Oriental Gems.

All gems of the finest quality, irrefragable of the part of the world from which they come, are generally spoken of as "Oriental" because the supply of precious stones came only from the east for many centuries, and when mines were discovered in the west, it was at first assumed that the stones were "Oriental." "Occidental" is the term applied to inferior stones to this day.

On the other hand, "Oriental topaz," "Oriental emerald" and "Oriental amethyst" are really all sapphires, and are given these names only on account of their color.

The Old School Slate.

Remember the old school slates, bound in red damask to prevent the noise of slate rattling that used to become unbearable until manufacturers found how to muffle them? Stores selling school supplies used to carry great stocks of them, for it was a rare day in a room that did not see a slate or two broken, but where are they all now? Since the boards of health decided that they were insubstantial and decreed against them the whole tribe has disappeared.—Columbus Dispatch.

Keep Busy.

If you keep reasonably busy the chances are that you will get into little mischief. This recipe is good for either sex.—Philadelphia Ledger.

COKERS SPLIT EVEN IN DOUBLE HEADER AT FAYETTE FIELD

Phillips Wins One Game of
Two Very Indifferent
Exhibitions.

SLIM CROWD IS IN ATTENDANCE

Angus Makes First Appearance on Mound for Home Team and Hitters
Creditable Ball; Would Have Won
With Better Support; Fisher Strong.

The Cokers split with Phillips in the holiday double attraction at Fayette Field yesterday. After winning the morning contest by a score of 4 to 3, Silcox's men turned around and dropped the afternoon game, 5 to 3.

Angus made his first appearance on the mound for the Cokers in the second game. The third baseman hurled fair ball and with other than inferior support would have won. Fisher, for Phillips, was in the form. The scoring started in the fourth inning. For Phillips, Gibson was out. Hales to Kerkfoot; Moody hit to right, going to first; Linker pulled a two-bagger, sending Moody to third, and the latter scored on Miller's drive to right. It was in this inning that Connelleville sent three men across the plate. Jones was safe on Robbins' error, went down to second on an error to Miller and scored on A. King's drive to center. Friel and A. King scored the other two runs. With the scoring of two runs in the sixth and two in the seventh, Phillips' run getting ceased.

Claring errors were the feature of the contest. Robbins of the visitors, was off color, making three slips, and Miller was second with two. The crowd at both games was slim. The score:

The Stage and The Players.

SCENE FROM "A BUTTERFLY ON THE WHEEL" WITH MISS LAURA BURT.

THE SOISSON.

EDISON TALKING PICTURES. No doubt many who will attend the performance of Thomas A. Edison's Talking Pictures at the Edison Theatre Friday and Saturday, September 5 and 6 to hear the Suffragettes argue the question of "Votes for Women" will anticipate having a good laugh. They will, however, hear the strongest and most sensible talk on the subject.

Six Cylinder Elapement.

Just ever played before the public. This record gives a graphic idea of what women are demanding and men with find it hard to find an argument against their just demands. A few of the women prominent in this movement who appear in the Edison pictures are Mrs. Jane Lee Laddlaw, Miss Harriet May Mills, Miss Eleanor Byrns, Colonel Ida M. Craft, Mrs. Cyrus W. Mehl and Mrs. Mary Ware Bennett.

Mr. Edison has perfected his Kinetophone to such a degree that records of many prominent statesmen have been ordered by the New York Historical Society as historic references for future generations. A picture of Mayor Gaynor and his Cabinet officers was one of the first to be made, and this record is a part of the program which will be shown here.

"A BUTTERFLY ON THE WHEEL." Great interest is aroused in the forthcoming appearance here shortly of the success of two continents "A Butterfly on the Wheel" at the Soisson Monday, September 8. The engagement of this play which has met with such universal success should be a staple one. In London and New York it was proclaimed one of the complete triumphs of the season—thus proving the appeal of its theme to be world wide.

STEEL PRICES ABROAD

Great Britain's Imports for Seven Months 102,725 Tons.

During the seven months ended July 31 Great Britain's imports of steel bars, angles and shapes amounted to 102,725 tons, a 10 per cent increase of nearly 41,000 tons over the same period in 1912. This is causing some concern in certain quarters and is attributed to the difference that exists between prices in England and on the Continent, as well as the United States. European steel prices being much lower. The majority of British steel men, however, seem to see no danger to their trade in the increase of foreign competition.

In Germany as well as Great Britain, steel prices are maintained at fixed levels by associations, but the British trade association seems to operate in greater harmony than the German ones. Since the end of 1912 at about which time the "boom" in steel came to an end, prices in Germany have been reduced more radically than in Great Britain.

Not long ago there was a scolding down of prices for steel in England, but even at the lower levels prices there are still above quotations in the United States by a comfortable margin, on the majority of products at least. In fact, the reduction in question was largely due to the growth of American competition in England.

THIS STORE IS A GOOD PLACE IN WHICH TO SEE WHAT IS NEW --- WELCOME!

Waist High in Merchandise

New, fresh and fine for the season in sight. The attractive, thoroughly good goods began rolling in while many of us were on vacation last month striving hard to forget our occupations.

BUT NOW

After the gladness and rest the sunburn is not so deep as the fresh strength and new spirit that fills us with eagerness to take up our vocations, and have joy in the happy labor of presenting to our patrons the THINGS NEW.

Some of our buyers are still on the trail, making a thorough job of it, and sending in reports—and pretties—of wonderful things seen, and secured for the people that look to us to overlook nothing that's in good taste and fashionable.

It's worth the one cent you pay for this newspaper for the accurate news of this store's activity. Whether ready to buy or not, it is important to be well informed, especially when the information is of FASHIONS, often the subject of general conversation at women's meetings and elsewhere.

BUYING IN FAIRMONT

Buckhannon & Northern Gets Rights of Way for Tunnel.

An indication that the Buckhannon & Northern Railroad Company is acting in good faith in its numerous assurances at its lines are to be extended in the Fairmont district, was shown recently when two valuable rights of way were taken up beyond Hickman's Run. These rights of way were purchased from H. Brady Meredith and Albert E. Meredith. The proposed tunnel of the railroad is under the lands of the former, while the western approach of the tunnel will be on the lands purchased from the latter.

These purchases undoubtedly mean that the railroad will be built, but does not necessarily prove that the line will be the one through that city, as the same property would be utilized if the Hickman Run route beyond the town should be selected.

The purchase of the Meredith properties are the first to be made in the vicinity of Fairmont. Much other property is under option, but the railroad company has not yet accepted any of it.

Ohio Coal Companies Merged. Announcement is made of the consolidation of the Belmont Coal Company, the Big Five Coal Company and the Turnstone Coal Company, all operating in Belmont county, Ohio, with a capital of $2,000,000. The consolidation will be effective October 1.
